(abbreviated as HAHAS) Are you a Texan who celebrates our Lady of Gethsemane, but don't like all of the bush league stuff that goes along with it? Are you the sort of Texan who likes to make fun of the rest of the country, while secretly wishing you were part of it? Are you afraid of anything that comes out of the mouths of the French, the Indians, or the Blacks? Well, HAHAS is for you! I am the President of HAHAS. All of our members are Texans in name only (we don't allow dual-citizenship!) We all live in the Houston and Houston area, and we all speak (with an exaggerated Texas accent) Anglo-American. We pride ourselves on our fair-mindedness, our thick skin, our sense of humor, and our personal pizzazz. Our goal is simple: To give you a voice! We represent the Houston community, but it does not mean that we're all from Houston. In fact, we don't even need to live in Houston to be members. If you're a Houston-area (or Houston-i-ean) native who likes to look and think like a Texan (likes the real thing, please!), we'd love to have you! What does this mean? All of our members are Mavs fans, football fans, basketball fans, and soccer fans. We're lovers of pizza, we eat beef on Friday night, we're proud Texans, fans of "South Park" and of just about every other movie about weird South American countries, and we're proud Americans. (What is there to be ashamed of?) We are also good-natured sports fans. We're respectful and open-minded, and generally give everyone the benefit of the doubt. But we're also smart, witty, and classy. So don't get the idea that we're intimidated by the French or the Americans! (We're just careful to whom and where we talk about the "French problem," and I'll leave you to figure out why we're careful.) All that said, our only real requirement is that you 82138339de
