Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a xerographic type optical detection unit, and a xerographic type image forming apparatus and, more particularly, to a xerographic type optical detection unit for use in a xerographic type image forming apparatus employing laser scanning such as an electrophotographic apparatus, a facsimile, or a multi-functional printer, and a xerographic type image forming apparatus for using the unit. 2. Discussion of the Background A xerographic type image forming apparatus, such as a copier, a facsimile, a printer, or a multi-functional printer, includes an optical detection unit for detecting a presence or absence of a document, a size of the document, or a copy quality. A technique of reducing the size of an optical detection unit is disclosed, for example, in Japanese Laid-Open Patent Publication No. 60-73169. According to this technique, an optical detection unit is mounted on a slidable paper feed tray, and when image forming on a document is ended, the optical detection unit is slid to a home position to prevent a space of the paper feed tray from being occupied by the optical detection unit when the document is not inserted, and to prevent document jamming. When printing on a continuous web, such as a continuous sheet of paper, an image forming unit forms an image on a surface of the continuous sheet of paper, a conveying unit conveys the continuous sheet of paper, and an optical detection unit is located at a position for detecting the presence or absence of a document
