I have installed Ubuntu 16.04.2 LTS on a ASUS x550ci. After first boot I got stuck with a blinking cursor on the top left side of the screen. I had to switch the nvidia graphics card to intel graphics card manually. I then installed the drivers from the links below. In Ubuntu 16.04.1 LTS it was not that hard to get a GUI and for me Nvidia graphics card was the only option available. After installing the drivers I get a black screen on boot. I have done the following to remove the intel graphics card: apt-get --reinstall install linux-image-generic-lts-xenial apt-get install i810-video-intel-lts-xenial These commands install modules for the Intel graphics chip as recommended in the driver updates guide. I then installed the drivers from the 2nd link below. After rebooting I have a black screen. How can I get a GUI? A: After installing the intel graphics drivers, I could not login. I reinstalled Ubuntu 16.04.1 LTS. To get the Intel graphics card working I had to install the intel-microcode package from the software center. After installing the intel graphics drivers Ubuntu could not find the graphics device. I created a symlink pointing to the driver directory, and everything worked properly after a reboot. The present invention relates to an aiming device for an automatic weapon and, more particularly, to such an aiming device of the type 3e33713323
