WinBuilder is a new utility that makes it easy to create a recovery disk by selecting/deselecting the components that you want to have on your recovery disk. Two types of recovery disks can be made. Either a professional one that will be used to recover all the hard drive data or a basic one that will only be used to recover files. Create a recovery disk from an existing ISO image Create a recovery disk from the zip file of an existing ISO image Create an ISO image from any other Windows image Install any required tools Run any required commands To build the recovery disk on a Windows PC, start WinBuilder. Select the components to include on the recovery disk. If you do not select any files, the default will be included on the recovery disk. You can also select components to uninstall. Press the 'Create' button to build the recovery disk. When the recovery disk is built, press the 'Start' button to boot your computer. Download this software if you like it. What's new in this version: New Default Image Builder - a new recovery disk creation process is now the default. This means WinBuilder creates a recovery disk from any existing image and doesn't require the user to select the components to be included. The user may now select components to be included or excluded. New Tools Category - a new Tools category has been added to the navigation bar which houses modules for WinBuilder. English and French - the installer now supports French and Spanish language localization. Fengyun - a barcode reader plugin for WinBuilder has been added. Use the 'Barcode' tool to generate barcodes for disk images or the 'Fengyun' tool to read barcodes on external media. If the barcode is not recognized, use the 'Try to read barcodes' tool.
