Aqeedah.Q: How to store validation in controller or validate once in model in Laravel 5.3 I'm validating a request to login. If validation is success I want to store some values (as session or cache) which is use for authenticated actions. Here is my controller method which I'm using for validating the login request. public function login() { $input = Input::all(); $rules = array(
'email'=>'required|email', 'password'=>'required'); $validation = Validator::make($input,$rules);
if($validation->fails()) { return Redirect::to('/login'); } else { // login for success } } what should I do for store values which I want to use as authenticated values. A: You need to use Auth to store something in session and do something else depending on logged in/out status. Something like this maybe: Route::get('/test', function () { if (Auth::check()) { // Logged in so do something that's authenticated } else { // Logged out so something that 3e33713323
